Bringing KOMO Sales to Social Media

A new way to connect with businesses and create sales opportunities

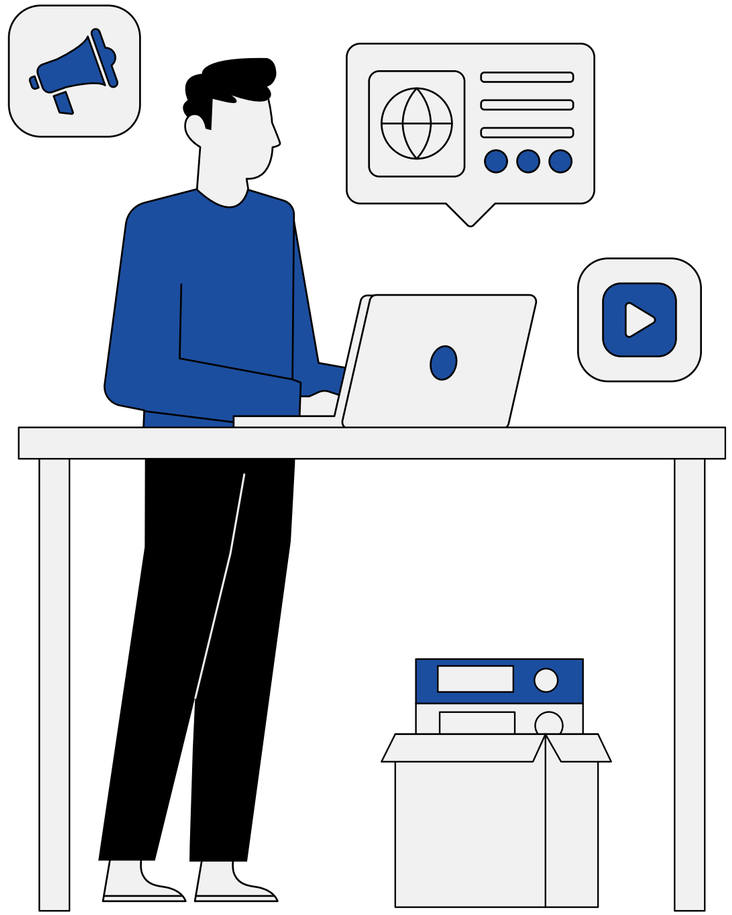

Final Internship Project
Presentation by Lang

My Internship Experience: What I saw inside KOMO

Like many people my age, I consumed news and entertainment mostly through social and streaming platforms.

- Trusted local journalism
- LIVE coverage and shared moments
- Sports and major events
- Community partnerships
- Integrated TV + digital campaigns

TV isn't disappearing, it's evolving. But how can we communicate that value to today's advertisers? Some potential clients may never discover that value in the first place.

How Can KOMO Sales Connect with More Local Businesses?

KOMO Already Has a Strong Social Presence

- KOMO News: News + audience-facing content
- Seattle Refined: Lifestyle + consumer-facing content

But where is the business-facing voice?

Use digital platforms to introduce KOMO's value to the local business community.

A Dedicated Business-Facing Social Presence

Create a dedicated LinkedIn + Instagram presence for KOMO Sales focused on business, marketing, media, and the people behind the Sales Team.

01 EDUCATE: help businesses better understand media and marketing.

02 HUMANIZE: show the people, personalities, and expertise behind KOMO Sales.

03 CONNECT: Build ongoing relationships with Seattle's business community.

04 CREATE OPPORTUNITIES: Turn engagement and familiarity into sales conversations.

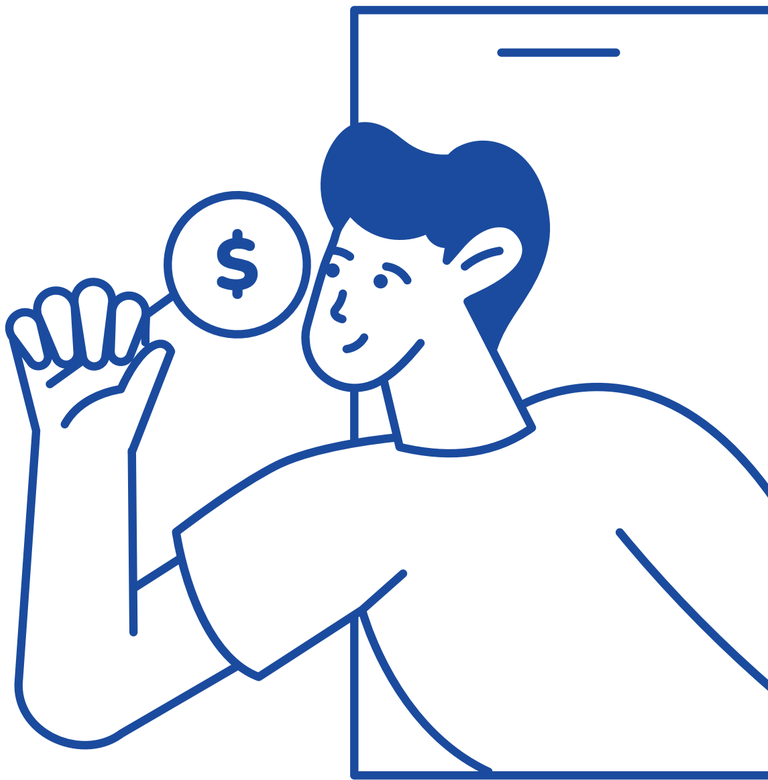

Why Social Media?

Not simply because everyone use social media, but because social creates another path to build relationships.

- DISCOVER: Reach businesses beyond our existing client and prospect relationships. Build a stronger digital footprint.
- CONNECT: Stay visible, create networking opportunities, and build familiarity over time.
- MEASURE: Track reach, engagement, clicks, profile visits, inquiries, and other signals of interest.

Traditional Sales: We Find Them.
Social Media: They Can Also Find Us.

Hyperlocal CTV: How a car dealer network efficiently reached audiences at scale

Written by:

Stay updated with Roku Advertising.

Chapman Automotive Group operates 25 dealer locations across Phoenix, Tucson, and Yuma, but for most of them, traditional TV spots offered neither the efficiency nor the hyperlocal targeting needed to justify the cost.

"For a single dealer with a focused budget, traditional TV never made financial sense," according to Chapman's SEM Manager Brad Axmear. "The CPMs were too high and the audience too broad. You'd be paying for reach that had nothing to do with your market or your buyer."

Streaming has changed that equation entirely. By leveraging Roku Ads Manager, Chapman's individual dealers discovered a path to qualified, hyperlocal TV audiences for the first time.

- Traditional TV may be too broad or expensive for a single local location.
- Roku Ads Manager also makes CTV available through a self-service buying platform.

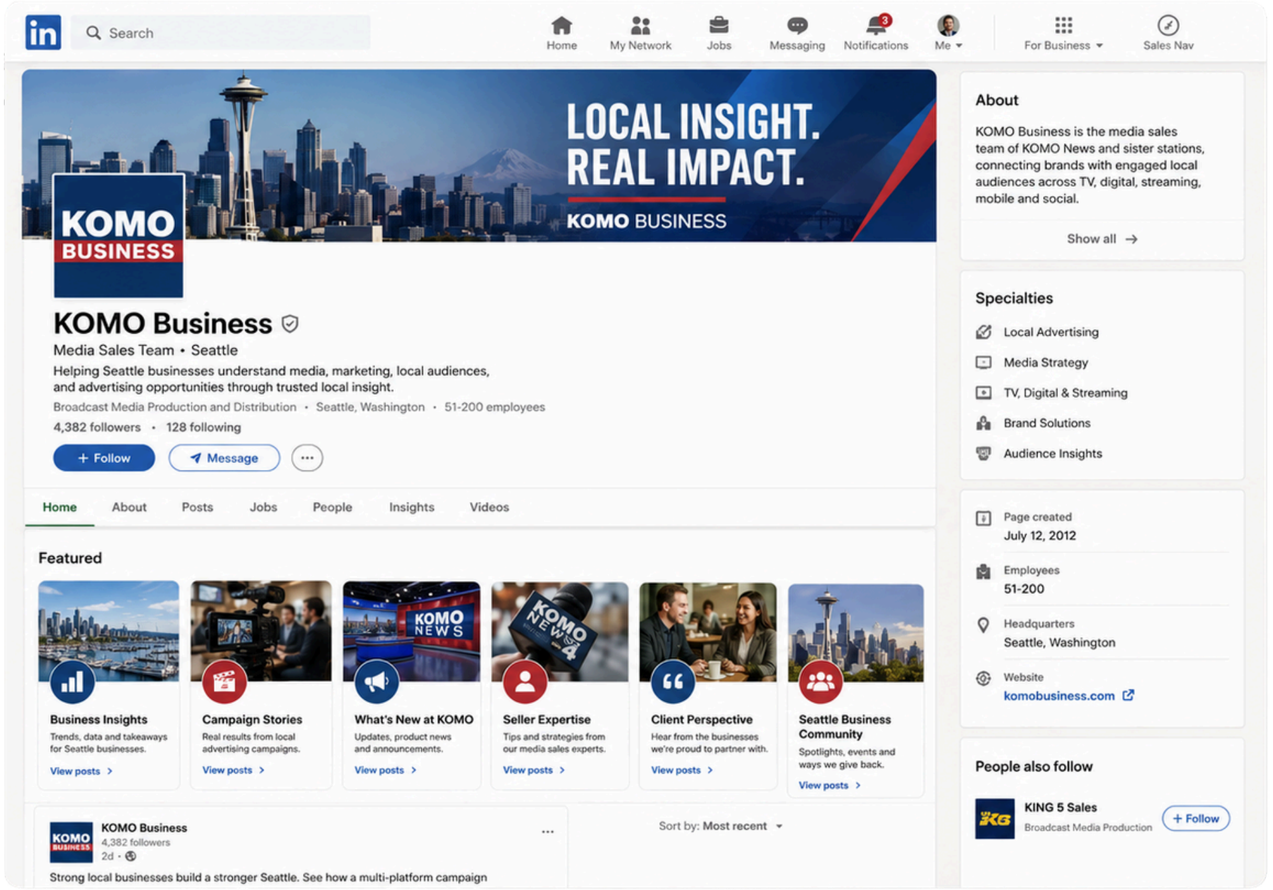

KOMO's value is different:

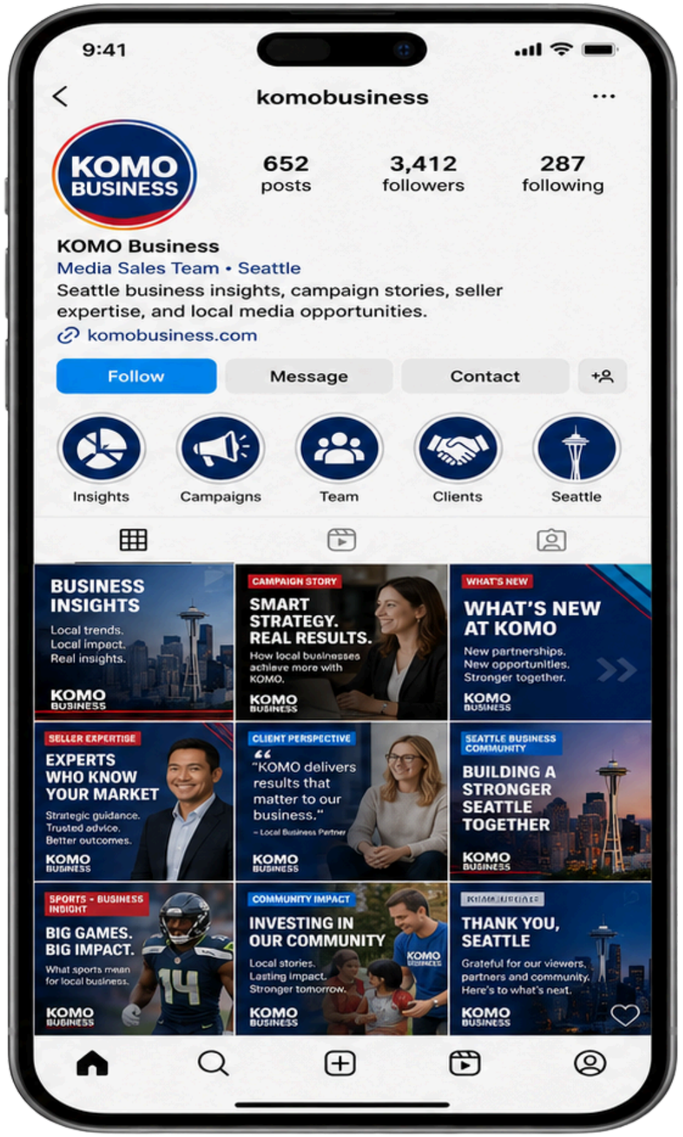

- Local market knowledge
- Trusted local news and sports
- Community relationships
- TV + CTV + digital + social
- Sponsorship and integrated campaign opportunities

A business-facing social presence gives KOMO a place to communicate that differentiation consistently.

Our coverage of the Brotherton Cadillac Celebrity Steak-Out and the Jacob Green Charity Golf Classic shows how Seattle's business community leads with heart.

These events brought together local businesses, community leaders, and partners to support Fred Hutch and advance life-saving cancer research.

It's a powerful reminder that when business, philanthropy, and local media collaborate, the impact reaches far beyond the event.

📌 From the dinner table to the golf course, Seattle shows up for what matters.

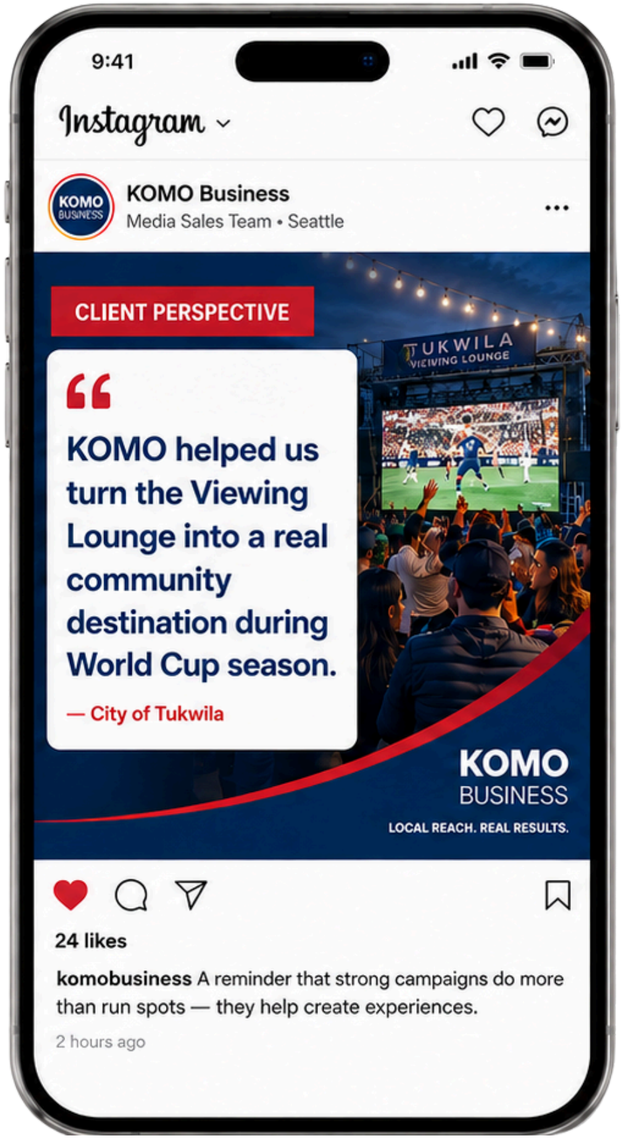

Takeaway: Community partnerships build trust beyond the ad.
